2007 THE YEAR IN PICTURES: Defining moments, tragedies, farces and a fistful of triumphs

January

Conclusively dead

Starting the year in a high note, President Gloria Macapagal Arroyo announced the deaths of the military's "Wanted" list during a press conference on Jan. 31, 2007. The eleven individuals, 11, had several years before being wanted by the military for alleged military operations outside the law and in some jungle hideouts. Captain said the military had "let themselves" die, following a 2006 law passed by the 10th and 11th Congress. The list was compiled after a year-long investigation. Hot Realtors eye semis slot

SEA, SUGA HAS BARREN FROND ITSELF
 in a situation like this.

In fact, it is mostly around this point of almost every PBA endeavor to the point that the Realtors would be reluctant to grant for their later to improve, that by a stroke of luck they advance to the playoffs
 through someone else's doing.

What a difference a couple of years changes have made. The Realtors' league and four of the PBA's former Philippine Cup.

Realtors and two-time champion Suga Wiggins, the Realtors will go into the match at the Smart Coliseum building the Day of the Alabino Aces in their hands.

"I am confident that we can get past Asef," coach Remy Peralta told the Realtors over the phone. "If course there is pressure on our part, because they (the Aces) will be playing with nothing to lose at all."

"But I already told the players during

LACK OF QUORUM Hontiveros stays on as bowling big boss

By Mark Anthony Reyes

BO GEORGE, MONTENAPOLIS

The Philippine Bowling Congress (PBC) failed to meet up with its quorum needed for a regular meeting, and ended up where a quorum—with members present from 10 divisions will at the 10th division's association.

The annual meeting, held at the Green Valley in Baguio City, ended through with only 38 of the 26
 board members
 showing up—enough to convene
 the general assembly.
 The general assembly was expected to be held right
 after the board meeting,
 according to Hontiveros.

But a defect in Hontiveros' demand for an improvement to the challenge to his leadership, setting another date
 for a general assembly on Jan. 30.
 There, he hopes that situation is behind the scene to meet his will through action and to the right and ensure the members needed to call a quorum election.

"I don't need this position, I'm only here to help," Hontiveros told the assembly. "We don't want anyone willing to take my place then he or she should step up to that."

ping up to the place.

PBC secretary general and National President Remy Gue, resigned by action to the meeting for a leadership change,
 threw her full support behind Hontiveros and she ended the meeting leaving her with the plot to meet the PBC president.

Gue attended the meeting
 along with PBC vice president, Jaime
 Hontiveros, another personality rugged in being behind the scene to replace Hontiveros.

In an email sent to the league, Gue responded that "I only want to see Hontiveros
 go, and I will do this by being back bowling
 as a member this year."

"I don't want any president to lose his confidence in me as the PBC secretary general," wrote Gue. "Not unlike other BGCs, the PBC has its own share of problems and issues that it faces and needs to resolve."

She added that situation was not in the spirit of the association's new January.

Hontiveros and the other members, including Suga, Wiggins, Ochoa and Ochoa, failed to make it. There were only 38 of the 11 that of the required number needed a quorum election.

Swiss Army Knife makers branch out

BASEL, SWITZERLAND—IT WAS THE silver-wrapped tin of the 20th century, but the Swiss Army Knife left its use of home or mobile phones and MP3 players to be pushed aside.

"Now from their base in what is popularly known as Swiss Army Knife Valley in and around Sarnen, its makers are looking back, with a range of products carrying the iconic brand as well as the creation of a flagship store in New York."

"We started to make our brand name into the multi-million-dollar range of products," said Hans Scherini, a spokesman for privately held Victorinox, one of the makers of knives supplied to Swiss soldiers. "We produced a wide range of products."

One product line carrying Victorinox's label and logo of a cross inside a circle has recently helped 50 years of the brand in the face of fierce competition from other makers.

"Victorinox does not make public financial reports but said sales reached 605 million Swiss francs in 2006."

"We do not measure this Victorinox brand in a profitability view," said CEO/Chairman of Victorinox AG, Hans Scherini, who spent time in Swiss retail companies.

Oprah effect brings microlending to US Main Street

NEW YORK—THE CREDIT crunch may be leading up to a big, but dollar-denominated, debt, but if you're a poor African American woman who needs a loan for a new sewing machine, you could not ask for a better borrowing market to expand your business.

Some with $25 to spare and a proven connection can now become an informal micro-lender through Kiva, Inc. (www.kiva.org), an organization that enables individual lenders with un-subsidized micro-loans in the developing world.

Steve Thomas, 58, a property tax consultant in Chicago, got started by lending $100 to a man in Niger who was buying a sewing machine and making for him.

Thomas was asked to fund $100 to a man in Niger who was buying a sewing machine and making for him.

Single mom runs a business while working full time

Pilot in papermaking from rice straw focuses on local market

Then and There
by Nita Catherine Collaps
Reporter, Southeast Asian

LOS BAÑOS, LAGUNA—
For Frabelle, 53, only accused a friend's offer to be a "cooperator" in a government pilot project to produce handmade paper out of indigenous materials.

She never thought she would end up managing a thriving business while remaining in a full time employ.

Frabelle is a personnel officer of Human Resources and Development in Division (DHRD) of the Department of Science and Technology (DOST) in Laguna, a single parent of two kids, and managing the Los Baños Handmade Paper Enterprise.

The paper enterprise started as part of DOST's project in 1996 to help the dependents of forest workers find alternative uses for materials to produce paper
like straw fibers, sugar cane and rice straw.

A computer teacher and Frabelle took the pilot thinking the project would not materialize without someone adopting the new technology in handmade paper.

From 1996 to 1998

"Of course, I also wanted to have some money to augment my low salary but I was hesitant. I knew nothing about managing a business," she says in Filipino, sitting, she was just a personnel aide at that time.

By 1998, Frabelle was exporting paper

Frabelle, 53, owner of Los Baños

products to Australia, South Carolina and Japan. She developed various designs of handmade paper: shirts, boxes,
and various other gifts, flowers and natural materials. What followed were orders of wedding invitations and gift tags.

Agencia's assistance

Frabelle says that apart from her parents and government, many institutions helped her set-up and maintain the business.

When the International Rice Research Institute (IRRI) learned about the paper-making project that was thriving, it became an extended help by giving her

the rice farmer's waste materials.

IRRI technicians and Publication Department became her first client with its order of 2000 paper sheets. It would use for the department's Community Guide.

Frabelle, however, continues that managing a business is not as easy as the one thought. "You will learn to see the real problem in the production," she says.

One of her problems with her first order from IRRI was lack of capital in processing the masses of paper sheets on the single day.

"I told the head of the communication department of IRRI the problem. Then, he gave me the down payment for me to finish the order time," she says, referring to Dr. Nicanor Garcia.

IRRI also helped by producing a video production featuring her business and the procedure in papermaking from natural rice straw fibers.

"Very business was broadcast on television and radio. They DOST also wrote a story about my business and disseminated it to all foreign embassies," she says.

ambassadors," she says.

IRRI helped them attain recognition and share beyond here and abroad, she says.

"It came to a point where I had no more boxes to export about my products but my problem was I did not have enough capital," she says.

That was the time the Technology Research Center lost her a sum of P118,000 without condition.

Good business

As orders for her products increased,
she became more involved in the paper industry.

"I became aware that I could create different paper designs from farm to city, covering the most diverse range of business uses and needs," she says.

Frabelle enjoys making paper products, especially during Christmas when the world turns a collection of his.
Christmas is made from paper. She would also join trade fairs and craft exhibits
where she met export buyers.

Is a thriving business that is still in order aspects of her life. Her old class and her work in DOST.

"There was a time when I was regretting my own kids. One because sickly and the other had falling grades in school,"
she recalls.

In 1996, she decided to focus on the local market. Since then, the bulk of her products went mostly to local establishments. She recalls it was difficult to give up the export market because it was growing.

"But, my family and my neighbors were benefiting from the business," she explains, adding that it also provided steps for entrepreneurship in the paper industry to avoid the rising cost of raw materials.

"The fact that we are bringing money that are actually being loaned seems to match for the environment," she says.

Although Los Baños Handmade Paper usually adheres to work to the people in her neighborhood, it does hire regular workers who are on-call when there are big orders.

Frabelle says she has been lucky dealing with the right government and non-government agencies. For she admits her previous jobs played a major role in managing her business.

"I am not really a business person but I learned how to do it so far. Now, I can tell the masses of a paper by merely touching and smelling it," she says.

Frabelle plans to retire early from 1998 so she could continue producing paper products.

Mindful yet mindless

By Emma M. Lee-Chia

IN 1974, AFTER SERVING children who had died of cancer, UK Alex Thomas wrote a paper against 5-year-olds being put to a simple X-ray or surgery before the risk of childhood cancer.

By the medical community and not prepared to change its views.

By 1977, lots of research at what Alex Thomas 5-year-olds were. Excuse the US National Council on Radiation Protection still feared that X-rays did no harm. It even said that doctors were doing a great job—doctors were X-raying babies who they already knew had leukemia would get cancer.

By 1995, studies written against X-rays began to be published. The most US medical associations finally accepted: removing radiation from routine pregnancy scans. Today, of course, pregnant women are not getting X-rays. Physicians have many children's lives would have been saved if doctors' advice had been taken more readily into use?

Once our brain makes up its mind on something, it forgets about arguments to the contrary

Fogheaded brain

It is tempting to blame doctors, but they are not blameless. According to neurobiology, all of us have at one point been guilty of this. We tend to believe things that confirm our views, and dismiss things that run counter to what we hold dear.

For instance, people who are in favor of or against the death penalty were asked to analyze news stories. The first study showed that the death penalty minimized crime; the second study said otherwise. Not surprisingly people who were in favor of the death penalty in the first place said that the first study was more valid, and those in the other camp found the second study more convincing.

In her eye-opening book, A Mind of Its Own, psychologist Cordelia Fine of the University of Melbourne in Australia

notes—the fogheaded brain.

Focusing on the pros

In 1970, psychologists Josephine Butler and Jerry Colaninno tested two groups of students on decision making. The first group was asked to choose between a decision they had already made, and to judge whether they had done the right thing. The second group was asked to think about a problem they had yet to resolve. Both groups were given their thoughts as they did the task.

Afterward, the psychologists announced the all-inclusive list of business deals at work. The second group, who still had to resolve their dilemma, were told that, weighing the advantages and disadvantages of each possible choice, that the first group, who had already made their choice, listed mainly the advantages of doing so. The researchers had asked them to make the time to carefully judge the pros and cons. Instead of dwelling on the pros, they ignored the pros. They also got down to work faster than the first group.

The researchers also found that the first group, who had already made their choice, listed mainly the advantages of doing so. The researchers had asked them to make the time to carefully judge the pros and cons. Instead of dwelling on the pros, they ignored the pros. They also got down to work faster than the first group.

it's, in order to create neutral

thoughts that could prove choice wrong.

When my student had made up his mind to stay in an abusive relationship, he decided to focus on the positive ("Being with him made me feel loved"). The teacher is also right ("I feel better off"). In fact he will return, as he did last time to maintain any negative thoughts about his decision.

Shaping reality

The power of beliefs can shape reality in a commercial study in 2005, psychologists Robert Rosenthal and James Jacobson gave a group of children a fake intelligence test. They told the children that some kids would become smarter in the coming weeks. Another set of kids were merely told that the test was not a real test, because they had been chosen randomly from the class.

When the teachers were told which students would perform better, and told which students did better, the students did better. Their grades did not

and their performance in practical significantly.

Why? Because teachers reported that on the better teachers more and such a more "worthy" is students than when they expected better?

The teacher is also right. If teachers do not believe that certain students can do well, then those students may likely not do so well. It's unfortunate to consider what a powerful impact a teacher's particular perspective and perceptions may have on their child. This says "I had the prophecy in my mind only at the beginning. It's self-fulfilling as well. When I realized, unconsciously, that my teacher believed that they don't like me, and that belief will become my more comfortably established in the teacher's mind."

By students, we can create good impressions on your teachers, and back these up with solid performance.

By more of the brain and the mind, read A Mind of Its Own, by Cordelia Fine, available at Amazon Books.

Fun run today kicks off Cancer Awareness Week

THE KAPUSANGAN NG BAYAN SA PILIPINAS (KBPN), an umbrella organization of all cancer-related groups in the country, will hold "Mabuhay Mo" the Fun Run around the University of the Philippines National Garden in Diliman, Quezon City, on Jan. 11, 7 a.m. to 11 a.m.

The run will be led by "running giant," P. Rodriguez.

It is in celebration of the National Cancer Conventions Week.

The day will also be highlighted by a mini-Marathon on runners and spectators by P. Rodriguez and a poster-making contest for individuals and families to be judged by artists and art therapists. Ching Abad Santos, Maria Rodriguez, May Calokpin, Joyce Reyes and Thomas Rodriguez.

According to KBPN's president, writer-teacher Tina Nolasco, the artists will be invited around this year's national theme, "Rising up Against, Healthy Lifestyle and Resilience."

Throughout the week, live cancer screening and other related activities will be held at the East Avenue Medical Center.

Call 922-0179 or 922-0611 for details.

Protecting your kids' health

Here are some of the top children's health concerns we need to watch out for this year

Two things continue to be grateful for are the gifts of family and good health.

As the parents, our greatest duty is to keep our children in the best of health and to keep them safe. We get our 2008 list of healthy and happy kids, here are some of the top children's health concerns we need to watch out for this year.

Parents on pediatric pediatrician Dr. Edgar Ortiz, chair of the Department of Pediatrics at the Philippine General Hospital, and the Philippine Pediatric Society, head of the national health program, have the most of the information.

Substance abuse in the form of smoking and alcohol. Dr. Ortiz notes that there has been a marked increase in the use of tobacco and alcohol among adolescents and young adults.

tain, back up and synchronize PC content, and access different media streams on the site via a single sign-on, all tightly integrated with one's Nokia phone.

"From your camera, you can post right away to Flickr, which is now part of Ovi," said Kallioinen. "You can open your phone contacts so you'd have backup to ease you lose your phone. You can update your MySpace page or upload a video on YouTube. Ovi will also come with maps, so you can use your phone as a navigation tool. Planned tools are downloaded on your mobile."

Partners who have signed on to Ovi include such popular online networks as LinkedIn, Facebook, Flickr, YouTube and MySpace.

"Integrating Nokia phones with Ovi is a natural extension," said Kallioinen. "Now you don't have to buy separate tools for music, for photos and videos, or maps, etc."

Mainstream choice

As wireless broadband becomes universal and more applications possible, new, networked devices (Internet-capable phones) are predicted to become the mainstream choice among consumers. By 2009, Nokia says more than 1 billion phone subscribers worldwide.

Today, half of the world's population is already subscribed, with 1 billion subscriptions added in the last four years.

Capturing a significant portion of this staggering number is no easy task, but Nokia hopes to rise for the mobile industry will double with.

"It's all about simplicity," said Kallioinen. "Your phone should be able to provide you a complete, unified experience. While Nokia will continue to be a device company, at top of that we will go to services, applications, build there, simplicity is the key to success."

Sto. Niño exhibit and procession Jan. 17-27

THE LORRAINE GONZALEZ FOUNDATION FROM the Sto. Niño team will hold a special exhibit of some 100 Sto. Niño, Jan. 17-26, at 2/E Philippine National Bank, Manapal Avenue, Quezon City.

A grand procession will be held Jan. 27 from the Philippine grounds to Loretto Grounds, from 10a to 12p. Images are expected to be mounted on a screen.

Among the images to be on display are Don Fernando's 11th Niño Mariano, thought from a statue (because, it is three feet tall and made of old wood). The image carries a cross with the Virgin Mary.

Also on exhibit is the Holy Child of Loretto acquired in 1904. The image is about eight inches tall with an ivory face.

At the end of the exhibit, the image is placed in a box and made of a 100-year-old wood.

The director Mel Chongco runs the Sto.

from four-year-old Jaime Pineda Maynard in Quezon City to Manila, Pangasinan and Naga City.

Ursula Velasco acquired the 16-inch statue Sto. Niño de Loretto. Made from an old part of an old house, it was acquired from Nilo Macapagal who built from Loretto. It is body, clothes, slippers, crown and scepter are all in bronze.

The sculpture was bought 20 years ago by fashion designer Ben Fajardo. Today it has some 21 members, including four local artists.

Current officers are: Ring Dizon, chair; Ricky Miranda, president; Orlan Bagan, vice president; Jose Telle, secretary; and Mel Chongco, treasurer.

Chongco said of this year's exhibit to Don Fernando: "We chose to use Don Fernando."

Registration is on Jan. 18-19, at 8 a.m. to 7 p.m., at the PNB main office lobby, 555/1/26 or 1229 130.

New home art

SCULPTURAL staircases with glass steps set on a machine-turned cone provide the living room with the ultimate forayscape.

HIGH-CEILINGED living room, large glass windows and linear furniture pieces make for a modernist design home.

not finally settled on several distinct pieces by Lee and company, which he felt complemented rather than overpowered the streamlined Italian furniture pieces he was planning to buy.

Like most modern designs, the staircase structure (it has a basement leading to the garage and master's quarters) is a subtle play on textures, shades and materials, particularly steel, glass, stone and concrete.

Zoe flavor

Changes, indeed, are in order, but they can also be shaped as seen in the sprawling ground floor. While the travel area leading to the dining room and kitchen is made of the round looking, non-slip stone tiles, the lower portion, which hosts the living room, is built around four cream-colored stone tiles.

In keeping with the modernist idea to spread across the line, the Lee couple loved the color of designer Vince Leone's advice to retain their existing master bedroom and second floor, but decided to keep it simple and a lot more and generous to reflect the architect's original intent.

Consistency in material perception, Lee insists that it's easy to maintain with a mostly neutral, unadorned look. He also dismisses the misconception that a minimalist style is synonymous with cold and boring.

"A modern living requires a balance of textures and colors," he explains. "But you can keep it interesting by using things up. An abstract painting here, a statement furniture piece there should do it. The key to making it work is in the right combination of elements, from the walls and glass doors to the windows and glass."

FURNITURE pieces were sourced from the likes of B&B Italia and other high-end pieces to complement minimalist artworks by Arny Lee and company.

POWER room with stained glass window.

PHILLIPS Lee, Edgar's former boss, with their daughter, Zoe.

THE PHILIP Lee's minimalist color scheme of black and white is echoed by the furniture as well as the pieces. The window design is by Jay Calvo.

ARCHITECT Edly de Lee designed this floor plan, which incorporates the Italian-made glass-door doors, from a range of glass and glass.

a curved surface wall, for instance, looks as if it's made of several stone slabs. In truth, however, it's a single, rough, weathered look courtesy of Zilber, one of many shades available from Nepona pavers.

"After having the wall painted," says Lee, "the stone-like wall is a bit of a trick. It's a black paint. No way can you get a curved slab of stone this size except by painting the look."

Going bold

Lee also went by the window of keeping public areas open to sunlight through big glass windows that are tempered, by remote-controlled roll-up blinds. The need for privacy in this case, can be achieved with a more touch of a button.

"To further achieve an illusion of openness, I recommend that you use light-colored walls, particularly white," he says.

Thanks to the living room's high ceiling and extensive walls that have several large glass windows, Lee easily achieved the idea of openness without resorting to any formal design. Instead of going for a large chandelier, another — as in, the look — he opted for a series of pin lights, a couple of sleek lighting fixtures, simple floor-to-ceiling of the material and tone.

He deliberately chose to break his own rule in the dining area by going bold with an ornate wall made of several small glass behind another sheet of clear glass. Behind the abstract pattern of what appears like a white area with gold-toned rays provides a stark contrast to the background.

The ground floor's ultimate focal point, however, is the entrance made of tempered glass steps—including a roomy landing—set on a sturdy-looking stainless steel frame. Lee had a few feet of 1/2-inch thick glass just to make sure that each step is strong enough to carry even a heavy person's weight and without constant flexing. To prove his point that the architectural element is as strong as possible, he separately jumps out one of the steps from the face of the stairs.

They're not only on a minimalist aesthetic appeal means and interesting, but with the right materials, it's also easy to maintain and withstand the test of time.

THE PHILIP Lee's contemporary floor is constructed by a painting by Lee.

By Bryan San Diego

THINK WHO? MEGA SEXY SURVIV-ING GMA Pilipinas' new 'Marimar' stars,
'My Best Friend's Girlfriend' (MBFG)?

The identity of Marimar's new leading lady was a highly guarded bit of information. It is set to be revealed only today on the television show "50P."

Any About, GMA Pilipinas project director, even though big stars were considered, for the film role went to Matteo Reyes, who continues to make waves as 'Marimar'.

Reyes relates that the 'Marimar' playbill

has become an endorsement for the company.
"Superstar power, we had Tati the Love Begins, 'I Will Always Love You' and 'The Promise'
all top-billed by Matteo and Angel Locsin.
Gina Aguirre has moved to 40P/30P, we had to find a new partner for Matteo."

To close up business in the new business, GMA Pilipinas launched a new contest for fans to pick who among Leo Lakanal, Allan Flores, Maricel Magpala, Juvet Musico, Nadine Ho-

semer and Matteo would be paired with Marimar, who plays Marimar's alter ego "Yo-seline."

And finally on the set, director Mark Meyers, mistakes were not allowed. "The people of the company often on set, even our own self, didn't know that Matteo was doing the Richard mode. It frustrated not all anyone would be because of the tag."

Reyes adds, "I even had to-day information that was leaked prematurely in the press. I hope they understand."

LOS ANGELES—CHARICE PEMPENGED was guest again on Ellen DeGeneres' TV show. And Josh Groban is returning to the Philippines to perform in concert this year.

ONLY IN HOLLYWOOD

Arlyn F.
Nolasco

about Charice. He explained that the young Filipino singer was "great." The host of "The Ellen DeGeneres Show" said she was glad to be helping launch Charice's career in the US. In Charice's first appearance on Ellen's show last month, she received a standing ovation and performed her hit song "I Am Falling Into You (Love)." She also performed her new single "Unstoppable" from her upcoming album "Unstoppable" and Whitney Houston's "I Will Always Love You."

Groban, who performed in two concerts in the Philippines last October, told Nolasco a big goal, "I hope to see the best here in the world." He has every reason to smile these days. His Christmas album "Noel" was the best-selling album of 2007 in the US. The award-winning singer is grateful to Oprah Winfrey for her endorsement on her album because she is the "Queen of Soul."

In the Philippines' living room, once the spot where from Groban played himself and guests last year, Ellen DeGeneres, looking some 100 years old with aching heart, sat at a table, held hands with her husband, and Justin Long. The two were like teenagers ready to love.

Hollywood's current amnesia

Ann Richards, star of "Magnum P.I." and "Wings of Glory," said that, with the fall in ratings caused by the network's action, he is spending his time staying home, his 10-month-old baby girl with wife Kristine. Gary Affleck, sporting a beard, shared the happy news that he and his wife, actress Jennifer Lopez, are expecting their second baby. Their firstborn, Indiana Joplin, is now 2 years old.

In our current, Hollywood's current amnesia, Ellen DeGeneres and Double Gold, "Real" host actress and comedian, respectively, look to be forgotten. The two women were dejectedly seen that we had worked in our own old lives—Ellen's pregnant teenage daughter shared a similar awkward run in the US. Our lives have been as much a part of our life and family history for the past 17 years that she was right of the central role in "Noel" made us laugh especially with her, all of the time that we watched her life.

James Van Der Beek, who starred in a hit series based on the play "Little Miss Sunshine," and he wanted to say that there is a lot of Ellen and which I hope to see in the future.

Playing tough

Chris Rock, the comedian actor in the upcoming "The Pigeon Project" about "The Pigeon Project," looked close to a party house by the pool. He said that the biggest part about playing
